A PIONEER PRINTER

And How He Learned to Make the Best of Things.

William Ludy is in Phoenix again. That is not a very startling statement, but it is of interest to old-timers who a generation ago divided honors in these parts with Geronimo and divided bacon and frioles with whoever happened along. Ludy was an Arizona pioneer printer and it is possible that he set the first streak of type that ever went into the form of a Phoenix paper. He is one of those Bohemian fellows who is at home wherever his hat is off and there is anything to eat, and where there isn't he's at home anyway.

It was twenty years ago that he drifted out of this valley, and it wasn't much over twenty minutes ago that he drifted back again. But he was recognized immediately by the few here now who haunted Phoenix print shops twenty years ago and was given the glad hand. Ludy is famous, but not to a way that brings him political honors or a large bank roll. He is famous as a type of the old-time coast printer whose religion is to make the best of everything and do it without kicking. An experience he had some years ago and which he related to a friend thus trates how he makes the best of things.

He had tried of the Pacific coast as a field too limited for his operations, so he journeyed as far east as Omaha hunting for a land of promise. By the time he reached Omaha he decided that the east was not what it was cracked up to be, so he determined to retrace his steps to the coast. He got a half-dozen water bottles, some handy lunch that would not spoil during the length of any ordinary railroad journey, and crawled into a box car. It was one of the old-fashioned kind with a trap door in the end which chanced to be open and was filled with through freight. After he got into the car a brakeman came along and locked the trap door. Everything was well for four or five days till he began to get low on grub and water, and he was just wondering whether or not he could stand a fast from that time till his car reached its destination in San Francisco, when he noted through a small crack in the door that his car had been shunted on a side track in a little town in Nevada. After a couple of days on the sidetrack it began to grow monotonous. Nobody likes to be in jail, though it may have its pleasant features, with no thought for the morrow what you shall eat or drink, but being in jail with no jailer and nothing to eat or drink has a tendency to depress one's spirit. Ludy would have been willing to go to jail or walk the rest of the way to San Francisco if he could have made any one hear, but he couldn't. If there was any one living in the vicinity of that side track he must have been deaf.

But before perishing he thought it would be just as well to find out what his car was loaded with in the hope that there might be something aboard that would sustain life. An examination followed, and from that time to the end of his journey Ludy had the time of his life and living was all yet. He noticed that the car was filled with patent medicines from a well-known manufacturer in Lowell, Mass., and from that time on till his car was finally picked up and taken to its destination, a matter of ten days or so, Ludy's regular diet was anasparilla for breakfast, hair vigor for dinner and pills for supper.

So grateful was he when he reached San Francisco that he wrote the Lowell firm a testimonial saying that his life had been saved.

TOWN VS. COUNTRY

Grammar School Girl Writes in Numbers of Boys.

A young girl of the Phoenix grammar school thus expresses her view of the country boy and against his city cousin who is apt to think that he sits in the center of civilization and that what the townsfolk do not know is hardly worth finding out:

The country boy is quite a jay. The city boy will surely say. But in this picture I will show. Some things the city boy don't know.

This city boy that I describe. Sits in the "A" class side by side. With other boys who look quite wise. Because they'll soon be high school guys.

This city boy has dapper hair. He's very neat and dapper. Of medium height and eyes of brown. And always passed his life in town.

Now this bright boy that's in class "A." About looking and making hay. He thinks they're through by machine.

DISTRICT COURT

Criminal Business on the Territorial Side Will Be Taken Up Today.

The criminal business of the April term of the territorial district court will be taken up today. The grand jury will be impaneled at the morning session and it will be confronted by the men who are under a cloud and in the custody of the sheriff. There are sixteen prisoners awaiting the action of the grand jury. There are some men in jail on bond and there are still others who may be brought in who are neither in jail nor on bond.

There are few cases of more than ordinary importance. In a half dozen of them assault with intent to commit murder of assault with a deadly weapon is charged. There are several instances of burglary and lesser crimes.

The civil docket for the present term is not a very long one.

The territorial district jury will be impaneled in one week from today and soon after that the men who are awaiting their trial will be free men or whether they will be made to swell the population of Yuma will cease to guess.

The business of the United States court will be all disposed of today with the sentencing of Milton Bravely, who was convicted of perjury last Friday night. He was the only criminal case on the United States side that went to trial this term. Three cases were continued and all the others of six were dismissed.

ANOTHER WONDER OF SCIENCE

Biology Has Proved That Dandruff Is Caused by a Germ.

Science is doing wonders these days in medicine as well as in mechanics. Since Adam delved the human race has been troubled with dandruff, for which no hair preparation has heretofore proved a successful cure until Newbro's Herpicide was put on the market. It is a scientific preparation that kills the germ that makes dandruff or scurf by digging into the scalp to get at the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality, causing itching scalp, falling hair and finally baldness. Without dandruff hair must grow luxuriantly. Herpicide at all druggists. It is the only destroyer of dandruff. Sold by leading druggists.
